

Q. There are many media blog and music promotional websites, so what does your website, Revival Synth aim to do, and why?

A. Revival Synth was set up for one purpose and that was to give unheard/unsigned artists a place to showcase their music and to try and get them recognised and with a lot of plugging and effort from all sides I feel it is doing what I wanted it to do. When you get artists such as Among the Echoes, Martyn Bailey, Mark Naylor, Synthie Decibelshock and many others coming from nowhere then it shows that if we share a few links it can make a difference. It can be frustrating at times because something that is so simple to do can often be too much to ask. I do my best to listen to anyone who contacts me and I try and find somewhere to put their track, that is why I started the 'Revival Synth Recommends' playlists so I can put their track with other similar artists in the hope they get noticed by others. At the time of starting Revival Synth it was just a hobby, now it is a passion and I probably spend more time on it than I should do but if a fisherman can sit for hours waiting to catch a fish then why can't I sit and listen to some talented musicians for hours on end
